

VACANCY

PROJECT MANAGER

Do you thrive off delivering first class customer service, building relationships and working as part of a talented organization?

As a rapidly growing business, we are now looking for even more skilled engineers to join us on our journey. Engineers who are independent, brave and versatile thrive in IK-Group; do you enjoy working in a fast-paced environment, can you handle delivering complex projects and being responsible for the tasks you manage?

There is nothing typical about our projects, you will be forced to innovate and devise new ways of thinking. Our clients rely on us to solve their most complex challenges and we have a long-standing track record in meeting this expectation.

As a Project Manager, you will have a key role in our organisation and you will be responsible for planning, leading and delivering complex tenders and projects. The role offers a great opportunity to work on unique projects in multiple geographic regions. Our clients are both EPC businesses and Energy Companies.

Our headquarters are in Stavanger and from here we work with Offshore and Onshore projects around the world. The role will be reporting to the VP of Subsea.

As our new Project Manager, you will contribute to the continuous development of the project management team and our project management execution.

ABOUT YOU

Technical background with education in a relevant technical field, business, or associated disciplines. It will be beneficial if you have experience with pipeline engineering.

To manage and deliver complex projects you will need experience with managing FEED, EP & EPC projects. Many of our project are international so it will be a benefit if you have experience working in a multicultural environment and preferably experience managing multinational projects.

Experience with the interface between engineering and fabrication, construction / Fabrication management knowledge and understanding, as well as site experience. Strong commercial acumen with knowledge of business and financial principles.

As our new Project Manager, you will have to demonstrate highly developed leadership skills. You will have the ability to lead a project team and demonstrate sound, rational judgement to align people and methods to achieve overall project success. You will be key in developing and maintaining relationships with clients through sharing information, collaboration, and cooperation.
